Delegated design and design-assist are reshaping how projects are delivered—offering opportunities for innovation, collaboration, and efficiency, but also creating new risks and responsibilities for subcontractors. This panel brings together a general contractor, specialty subcontractor, design professional, and insurance expert for a candid discussion about how these project delivery approaches work in practice.

PANELISTS WILL EXPLORE EACH STAKEHOLDER’S EXPECTATIONS:

How Design Responsibility Is Allocated

Common Pain Points

The contractual and insurance implications every subcontractor should understand.

Attendees will walk away with a clearer grasp of where their obligations begin and end, how to protect themselves, and how to make delegated design and design-assist a value-add instead of a liability.
